Make Jellies and Jams
for Soldiers—Comment.

The back-to-the-kitchen movement, concomitant of the back-to-the-farm campaign, has been taken up by society.

Of course, it is for the soldiers and sailors that the kitchen has been invaded by matrons of the most exclusive social circles.

Reading that the Sammy away from home will want at least some of the "kind-that-mother-used-to-make" variety of food, the society leaders of Philadelphia adopted the idea of making jams and jellies for soldiers.

The scheme initiated in the Quaker City has spread to the resort towns of the Atlantic coast as far North as Bar Harbor, and large quantities of sweets are being canned for the use of the soldiers.

So interesting has the work been found that jam-making parties have been arranged as smart social functions.

Maj. Gen. George Barnett, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Barnett were hosts at a brilliant dinner party last evening.

With the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Daniels among the guests, dinner was served at small tables in the delightful garden of the commandant's house, which was strung with gay Chinese lanterns for the occasion.

A section of the Marine Band played during the evening, and a platform had been erected under the trees for dancing.

Mrs. Barnett's elder daughter, Miss Lella Gordon, was among the guests at the dinner. She came to Washington for the occasion from Wakefield Manor, Gen. and Mrs. Barnett's place in Virginia, where she and her sister, Miss Anne Gordon, are spending the summer.

Mrs. Barnett will leave town tomorrow, accompanied by her daughter, for Wakefield.

The Secretary of State, who is at his summer home at Henderson Harbor, will go to Sackett Harbor to address the student officers at Madison barracks.

The Secretary is having the most complete rest he has had in some years. He is an enthusiastic fisherman and is on the water every day. The black bass, which has been his principal quest for years, has a rival in his interest this year in the cuckoo. The Secretary has landed several this season, a pursuit which has afforded him plenty of sport.

Miss Leta Robinson, who has been visiting Mrs. Alexander D. Pratt at Newport, will be a guest here this week of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean at their country home, near Glen Echo.

The wedding culminated a romance which goes back eight years when Miss Bend was touring the Orient with Mrs. Straight, then Miss Dorothy Whitney, and Mr. Fletcher was secretary of the United States Legation at Peking.

The marriage took place in the presence of a party of relatives and friends from Virginia. The ceremony was performed by Dr. R. Aubrey Williams, Norfolk, Va., assisted by Rev. R. G. Gilmore, Fredericksburg, Va.

Miss Mae Perin was maid of honor and J. W. Ford served as best man. Dr. A. B. Chandler, dean of the Fredericksburg State Normal School, was among the guests.

Mrs. Charles R. Davis, wife of Representative Davis, of Minnesota, left Washington yesterday for China, where she will visit her son, Capt. Davis. She will make the trip via the Pacific Coast via the Canadian Rockies, arriving at Vancouver to sail August 2 on the Empire of Russia.

HOROSCOPE.

Thursday, July 26, 1917.
Good and ill contend today, but it is on the whole rather a fortunate day. Uranus, Venus and Mars are in benefic aspect.

There is a sign read as most fortunate for love affairs, especially where Mars rules the men; therefore soldiers should be subject to an uncommonly good direction.

The planets foreshadow inventions, not only of instruments of war, but of small things that enable the saving of energy and money.

Chicago has an especially promising rule, indicating supreme achievements.

Washington has a government of the stars making for growth that is astonishing and Saturn gives promise of rising values in real estate.

In the Middle West Iowa comes under a sway of the planets which seems to presage prosperity. Good crops will bring profit, but there is indication of many persons seeking the State as a place of abode.

California has a way making for sensations and excitement of an unexpected character.

This should be an exceedingly lucky rule for weddings and entertainments.

While the country is on the verge of realizing war, many brilliant social affairs will take place, the seers declare, and this is the working out of the old psychology of opposites.

Boston will claim national attention by some great philanthropic idea.

Men of fame will pass through a trying period in the next few months, when malefic planets may destroy many of them.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of an active, successful year.

Children born on this day will be lucky all through life, in all probability.

RYAN SUCCEEDS HURLEY ON Red Cross Council

President Whison yesterday notified Henry P. Ryan, chairman of the Red Cross War Council, that he had named John D. Ryan, of Butte, Montana, to succeed Edward N. Hurley as a member of the War Council. Mr. Hurley resigns from the War Council to become chairman of the Shipping Board.

Mr. Ryan is president of the Anaconda Copper Company and was only recently named to the Red Cross as director general of military relief. In his new capacity Mr. Ryan will continue to give, as a member of the War Council, special attention to seeing to it that the Red Cross provides adequately to its part for our own soldiers and sailors at the front or in camps.

In reference to Mr. Ryan's appointment, Mr. Davidson authorizes this statement: "The War Council greatly regrets to lose the assistance of Mr. Hurley, but in no way could the vacancy have been filled to the greater advantage of the Red Cross than by the appointment of Mr. Ryan. Like many others, he is devoting his whole time as a volunteer to serving the nation through the Red Cross."

With Asks $90 a Month.
Mrs. Mary L. Esch fled answer yesterday to the petition of her husband, Dr. Victor H. Esch, for limited divorce. The wife makes countercharges of cruelty and asks the court for a limited divorce and permanent support. She claims that her husband earns $90 a month and she says $90 of this is needed for her support.

DIVIDENDS OF LIFE.

By DOROTHY DIX.
The World's Highest Paid Woman Writer.

After all, life is just a sporting proposition and we get out of the game just what we put into it. If we go to it with enthusiasm, energy and interest it pays a hundred per cent dividend, but if we go to it at all, listlessly, half-heartedly, it bankrupts us. Which explains why some people are happy and successful while others are miserable failures.

In reality we all have pretty much the same raw materials out of which to build our destiny. Most of us get married. Most of us have children. Most of us work for our daily bread, and whether out of these conditions of existence we extract joy or sorrow depends not upon some inscrutable fate, but upon ourselves.

Take friendship, for instance. We are always hearing people complain that they have no friends, that no one cares for them and that the world is a selfish place where there is no such thing as a disinterested affection. Such a wall is an indictment of the individual who utters it and not of the balance of humanity. Such a one is getting out of the game just what he puts into it.

When people tell you that they have no friends it is proof positive that they are not friendly themselves. When they tell you that no one cares whether they live or die it is because in all their miserable, selfish, self-centered lives they have never done anything to bind another's heart to them. They have never gone to a man in financial trouble and offered him enough money to tide him over a hard place. They have never sent a load of coal to a poor widow, or paid her rent.

They have never given a struggling boy or girl a hand up the ladder, or taken a child to a circus. Why should anyone love them? On the contrary you never see an individual who has been generous and sympathetic and helpful and who has let no opportunity pass to show his or her interest and affection in his or her fellow creatures, who lacks for friends. The secret of popularity is no secret at all. It is just taking out of the game what you put into it. If you want to be loved you must make yourself lovable. If you want to bind people to you, you can do it with strings of kindly deeds. The magnet that draws all other hearts to us consists in having a great big human heart ourselves.

Whether we get happiness or misery out of marriage depends not so entirely on our attitude toward it, as it does on a fool expects marriage to be nothing but a romantic dream that is one long thrill of bliss. The sensible recognition of the fact that marriage is a thousand sacrifices and adjustments to each other, and that they are inevitably deprived of much of the liberty who seek in it a way to escape from the world, is a more realistic basis for a happy marriage.

There is no husband who does not have his times and seasons of gloominess. There is no wife who upon occasion does not act more like a silly and spoiled child than a pin-feathered angel. There is no married couple that does not find that marriage is more or less of a failure, and there is no married couple that could not make marriage more or less of a success.

They get out of it what they put into it. The man who consciously determines to build up a happy and successful home of which he makes himself a happy and successful part, and who is not afraid to sacrifice for the sake of the man who is dearer than his own comfort and luxury to her.

No outside conditions can make matrimony a happy estate. Money, beyond enough to provide for the bare necessities of existence, has nothing to do with it. There are quarrels and bickerings in palaces, and peace and contentment in hovels. Whether marriage is an earthly paradise or a hell depends absolutely upon what a man and woman put into it. That they get out of it.

And the same thing may be said about parenthood. No one can deny that children are a great care, a great expense, and a great responsibility, and that they often are ungrateful and unappreciative to the parents who have made them. But it pays to raise children, or it doesn't pay, according to the way you do it. If a man never shows his children any affection, if he is hard and stern with them so that they tremble at his step and never think of him in any other way than as a jailer they mean to escape from as soon as they are old enough to do so. If he is too much absorbed in business to even get acquainted with them, then parenthood is a losing investment for him.

It is the thing out of it but the sacrifices he has had to make and the work he has to do to support his children, because that is all that he has ever put into fatherhood. But

If he has been a loving and affectionate father, who has shared with his children the joys and sorrows of life, who has collected the dividends of a millionaire on parenthood every time a little arm has slid around his neck, and he will go on collecting it to the end of his days in the knowledge that he has sons and daughters who consider it their greatest privilege to minister to him.

Finally, we get out of our work just what we put into it. I asked a most successful man once what occupation he would advise a young man to go into. The man replied, "It does not matter what he does. The only thing that counts is how he does it. A man can make a fortune in anything if he does it well enough."

Herein lies the secret of all success. No man or woman ever achieved fame or fortune in any line who did not put his or her whole soul and mind and body into the thing that he or she undertook to do. It is the enthusiasts who do things and who have such joy and interest in the thing they are doing that they get doubly paid for every effort. It is our own pleasure in doing the thing we like to do that turns the work into play and makes play profitable.

This is a truth that we cannot take too much to heart that all enjoyment comes from within. It is our own attitude toward the thing we are doing that makes it pleasure or pain and brings happiness or misery, success or failure. There are no favorite sons, really, in life, and what we get out of the game is just what we put into it. In the last analysis it is all up to us.

Fight Over Vaccination Figures in Divorce Suit

William D. Hoban filed answer in the District Supreme Court yesterday to the suit for limited divorce brought by Grace D. Hoban. The husband denies the wife's charges of misconduct and makes counter-charges of misconduct against his wife. He also denies that he interfered with the medical treatment of their invalid child and states that most of the trouble along this line was caused by the wife's refusal to have the child vaccinated.

WHY SOCIETY WOMEN WASH THEIR OWN HAIR

They do, not because it is a fad, but because they wish to obtain the greatest possible hair beauty and be sure they are not using anything harmful. They have found that in washing the hair it is never wise to use a makeshift but is always advisable to use a preparation made for shampooing only. Many of our friends say they get the best results from a simple home-made canthox mixture. You can use this at a cost of about three cents a shampoo by getting some canthox from your druggist, and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes enough shampoo liquid to apply to all the hair instead of just the top of the head, as with most preparations. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear in the rinsing water. Your hair will so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you—Adv.
